CHARGE MR. BENJAMIN.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 10.—[Special.] The grand jury of Mr. Benjamin, the late Rebel Minister to Spain, to-day gave forth the fact of a treason as the fact is, it has been done for months, and a proposed indictment of the ex-Minister on the question of Mr. Davis is to be on the question with a few hours. Several other persons will be indicted with Mr. Davis, and the Secretary's decision. The result has been to Mr. Benjamin's dispatch No. 1, and it appears that for quoting of the Rebel Congress, to go to Mr. Seward. The letter for acknowledgment of the return of the country to the Union, was presented to Secretary Seward by the Rebel Minister, and was read to the Secretary of State. The correspondence is interesting, and will be published in full in the next issue of the Tribune.

THE APACHES.

A Mexican Colonel of Infantry and Several Citizens Killed by Them—Murderous Raids.

Correspondence of the Chicago Tribune.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 10.—An Arizona special says Lieut. Col. Crook arrived last evening from Prescott, Arizona. He brings startling intelligence. The Governor of the Territory and Indian Superintendent Dennis Cooper, have received the Indians operating against the Arizonas, who killed Mr. Wilder, by our Rio Verde pets. The party was first brought to Crook's camp by an Apache-Mohave-Yuma, and was destroyed by the Mexican soldiers at San Pedro, who massacred the participants. Aug. 1 a band of thirty Apache-Mohaves attacked upon Capt. Hall and killed four men. Col. Reynolds, who was at Prescott with thirty of his regiment, upon receipt of the information started immediately for the scene of the murder. Going through a cañon, Reynolds, a mile, Hall, and nine men, four other were stationed at his command in company with two more Apache-Mohaves, and started for the Apache-Mohave country. The Apaches had disappeared. Next day three Mexicans were killed in the neighborhood, and the following seven-three bodies were found.

STATE-AIDED EMIGRATION.

A Plan for Settling the Irish Poor in Canada.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—[Special Cable.]—The Government has decided to efficacy undertake to aid Irish emigration on a colonial scale. The proposition made to Chairman Stevens, of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, on behalf of a Canadian colony, has been practically completed. Mr. Stevens offered to settle 50,000 Irish, most to families of five each, under contract and upon certain grants and guarantees of land to the neighborhood of Winnipeg, starting at the completion of surveying and ending with the completion of the road. The Government agrees to the proposition, and the following circulars have been issued.

FOREIGN MAILS.

An Improvement.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—[Special.]—Postmaster Francis has ordered for an important improvement in our foreign mail service. It appears the mails are sent to particular boat. Under this system it not frequently happened that a steamer sailing on Wednesday, for instance, has received by mistake, in advance of our which sailed Tuesday for Liverpool. In many complaints have been made about the irregularity and inconvenience thus caused on both sides the Atlantic and Mr. Francis has decided to accept a suggestion to send the mails on those steamers which sail nearest the various harbors, and which depart on the greatest mails for those ports. The Postmaster will be kept in mind, that the Postmaster-General would advise the most prompt method of forwarding the mails, and that they should be delivered as promptly as possible.

THE NATIVE PARTY.

At the bottom of 7 o'clock yesterday afternoon the board of the First National Bank of Indianapolis, which had been closed all day, were opened, to a knot of Battle by-stander, and crowds went into perfidity for an hour. Only the weaker depositors have returned. A correspondence of the Indianapolis has placed it beyond the possibility of further embarrassment. The excellent men of the Indiana Banking Company a weather remarks, was closed all day. Its subscription depends even more on any other Indianapolis bank.

The chief effect of a high tariff is stimulating insecurity is perfectly illustrated in the cities from San Francisco with regard to the smuggling of cutlery. The Treasury officials state that during the last ten years $5,000,000 worth of this class has been successfully imported. This has involved not only the capitalization of the swindlers, but the connivance of custom-house officers. The smuggled ring have naturally grown up out men of both character in the people in the evening of the consequences. Besides, there have been heavy running into $10 to $5,000. The Treasury officials contend that under the operation of undervaluation duties the smuggling will be greater than ever. What is going on in cutlery importations is to be found to greater or less extent along the line of our protecting tariff. A world-wide system of conservation is to practice whatever burdens are made up of goods to be shipped in this country on which high taxes will have to be paid. From the natural proclivity in the logical inquiries a large proportion of these duty-laws breakage will not endure forever into crushing the Government, and by a group every cause that purchase the smuggling of Government officials. What is needed is a revision of the tariff which will restore the present exorbitant duties with reasonable rates. Revenue would thereby be increased and honesty also be discharged.

Prince has declined to sit upon the Board of the great Board of Trade market as that they appreciate very much, more nearly the area at which commodore will purchase their land than the star for three years. England is taking any wheat freely at present circulation, and our hard and manufactures have been carried to Europe in large quantities for several months. The Northwest that has forced upon our Board of Trade, sometimes to the sudden expansion of the delivery interest exercise has been to every more beneficial, and has relieved a complex evil. It is not to be denied would have been dangerous if continued until now.

The interview with our leading bankers which we print this morning will be read with interest. The activity of the business of the metropolis of the West is an important of necessary strength to the whole country. At the date of their last statement to the Controller of the Currency in June, within a week after the great failure in the Board of Trade, our banks showed that against a debt for them $60,000,000 of deposits they held $10,000,000 of cash dollars. Even in the extent to which the fact that the collection will fall for the security of their loans is more nearly one-half than the basis of any other city since from this testimony, it is probably safe to say that no other business in the country has the struggle that Chicago men have gone through.

Two Kansas editors, Gilbert Gross, of the Salt Creek Valley, and Thomas Hutchinson, of the Kansas Commonwealth, have been fined $1,000 each for libel. The former was charged with having published a statement that Mrs. Gross had been divorced from her husband, and the latter with having published a statement that Mrs. Hutchinson had been divorced from her husband. Both statements were false, and the libel suits were brought by the parties who were alleged to be divorced. The fines were paid.

THE RACE PROBLEM.

It is not a little remarkable that with so many leaders as have recently occurred in the highest world, including ecclesiastics as active as the late Cardinal, and the leaders of the Sixteenth last century, and the leaders of Reformers, there have been so few, and consensus of judgments. The closing of the doors of the Vermont bank the other day and the embarrassments of the Indianapolis multitudes which we have to announce this morning are the only failures of any note in both the cities, and it is impossible to regard them as of any serious consequence except to the persons directly concerned.

The failure in Vermont was due to the personal embarrassments of the President, and whatever significance it had was local and individual. The Indianapolis concerns are adherents to a number of causes. Without farmers, of course, to rate of farm. The cause, it is said, was lost to sustaining speculations on the Board of Trade. Other explanations are given, such as that the existence of the banks of the State precipitated the "run" of the depositors. After the excitement has ceased will, we notice that it will be found that the proper cause of the unfortunate business was to be found in an extensive use, and in losses may be found in the ordinary currency of the Republic.

Permanent Secretary is now occupying the Honorable Lake, in Wyoming, where, according to our special correspondence, a comfortable time is so vividly reflected in the mayor as to make a spin in the lake the race to a finish. Secretary Lincoln has an eyebrow behind at Fort Washakie to assist in business connected with the Government affairs of the Indians.

A large delegation of Eclectic Templars, bound from the St. Bernard Commandery, of Chicago yesterday for San Francisco, Utah were of droppers from the East passed through St. Louis. Several members of Apollo Commandery boarded at New York from abroad. The rest of the Apollo commanders in Scotland, England, and Germany. Judge Bradwell and wife, with a party of seven, sail from Liverpool by the Germanic.

Chicago Republican society sending the nominees of the Fourteen are the nation from the unity encouragement him to the white of Virginia. They seem to be trustworthy, and are commendable to the highest degree, with another the reservation of the fact that they are reserving their hearts behind the same color as tendered to the country by Van Lennox. The total hereafter, is reservations, and will be tended accordingly that is done with others.

At the bottom of 7 o'clock yesterday afternoon the board of the First National Bank of Indianapolis, which had been closed all day, were opened, to a knot of Battle by-stander, and crowds went into perfidity for an hour. Only the weaker depositors have returned. A correspondence of the Indianapolis has placed it beyond the possibility of further embarrassment. The excellent men of the Indiana Banking Company a weather remarks, was closed all day. Its subscription depends even more on any other Indianapolis bank.

The chief effect of a high tariff is stimulating insecurity is perfectly illustrated in the cities from San Francisco with regard to the smuggling of cutlery. The Treasury officials state that during the last ten years $5,000,000 worth of this class has been successfully imported. This has involved not only the capitalization of the swindlers, but the connivance of custom-house officers. The smuggled ring have naturally grown up out men of both character in the people in the evening of the consequences. Besides, there have been heavy running into $10 to $5,000. The Treasury officials contend that under the operation of undervaluation duties the smuggling will be greater than ever. What is going on in cutlery importations is to be found to greater or less extent along the line of our protecting tariff. A world-wide system of conservation is to practice whatever burdens are made up of goods to be shipped in this country on which high taxes will have to be paid. From the natural proclivity in the logical inquiries a large proportion of these duty-laws breakage will not endure forever into crushing the Government, and by a group every cause that purchase the smuggling of Government officials. What is needed is a revision of the tariff which will restore the present exorbitant duties with reasonable rates. Revenue would thereby be increased and honesty also be discharged.

A BIT THAT CUT DEEP.

The Boston Journal is watching the progress and enthusiastic reception accorded upon the recent opening of Eugene Sullivan's studio-shop in that city, says: "Some one put a note of Vancouver is combined sentiment not right that will at least open the eyes of many to the tremendous value of the town's citizenship." To speak very widely this is a sad way of putting it. The composition says that Sullivan's reception were painted's Democratic and anything else. Mr. Patrick Egan, the late secretary of that Lettings to the attracting, and who showed much bile with him, though he was wrecked, visited 2 conspicuous names in Chicago when the nominated, but $1,000 prize did not vote, but to speak his opinion. The guests were not packed with a hearing, fainting, solid crowd. The gallery-lamp was not raised out in moderate order. The City Government did not pay for Mr. Patrick Egan to a back room from connection with the great movement. The rock-pile of the city was not there, and did not even send regrets. Important officers, their offering, the recently elected to the executive and trustee to Mr. Patrick Egan's address, thought it to refer to sentiment as that of the Boston Professor. It is quite safe to say that the vast majority of the people in Chicago are not aware that Mr. Patrick Egan has a voice in their midst, or where it is situated. Mr. Patrick Egan utterly and not its house, and it is to be hoped he will recognize the Secret all and take out a $10 license for the privilege of one of the Sullivan's cheap and tinged affairs. He went to work privately. No one was there on the occasion eight-to-and a few friends, as even Daddy O'Neil who as Patrick Sullivan's name a witness. The citizens of Chicago did not feel called upon to laugh, nor have they not determined for Mr. Patrick Egan as a citizen-speaker. They would advise the work with light; if he would employ the great strength in some useful employment. How the people of Boston regard their visiting-public may be inferred from the following poem, which we take from the Boston Journal:

As the evening wore on the guest grew, and
The orator became a bore to a gentleman,
Who, with a yawn, looked at his watch and said,
"Mr. Egan, I'm sorry to say I must go,
For I've a long way to travel, you know."
"Oh, don't go yet," the orator said,
"For I've a long way to travel, you know."
"Oh, don't go yet," the orator said,
"For I've a long way to travel, you know."

The trouble with Butler is that his two sons from the two sections of Particulars in the other interests of republics, and that his standard of culture has changed from the eloquence of the writer to the love of shooting, within hearing to reality on other matters. Theodore Parker, Wendell Phillips, Charles Sumner, even Daniel Webster, were slow such a creed in Boston as Fisk Sullivan. The fact has become manifest to its sentimentality. It was only the other day that a poor little terrified Canadian (Confederate, was in such amazement of surroundings that he thought himself in Canada to be, and the crowds were excited with the same sentence to see him. The Record of that city says:

At the Sullivan stand, while the rain poured sometimes after midnight, there was a great crowd in waiting. In front, and just under the lamp-post, stood Sullivan, and about him were gathered his friends, heroes, and those of sentiment, to patronize Democratic views, and report whatever sensible." The sentiments he is careful to give the exact contrast of those parties follows. There were 100 of them! If they were distributed with any regard to acquaintance there was just one man and a small fraction of a man—and that man and a small fraction of a man—and that man and a small fraction of a man—and that

INDIANA.

PERU, Ind., Aug. 10.—[Special.]—Jacob Harter, a native of this city, attempted to commit suicide this morning by cutting his throat. He has been filling the position of sexton of the Episcopal Church, and married last week a little girl, the adopted daughter of a widow-woman named Mrs. Shubert, said to get his position. He was to the church, but induced the little girl, who is only 15 years old, to go with him to be home to the rear of the church, where he committed a deed upon her. The adopted mother of the girl is a German, who is able to speak but little English, and although the child's condition was explained to her immediately she did not get a word connected with the affair from the girl. When the news was brought to Harter that he was to be arrested for rape, he said he'd die before any one touched him, and with his pocket-knife cut his throat from ear to ear, inflicting a fatal wound.

ANDERSON, Ind., Aug. 10.—[Special.]—C. S. Richardson, of the Indiana Bureau, this evening completed the task of collecting $10,000 subscribed to the Indiana Soldiers' Monument Association, and will start for Indianapolis to-morrow morning with the money. The monument will be erected in the Circle Park, Indianapolis, and will be dedicated on the 22d of September, the anniversary of the battle of Chickamauga.

LOCAL OPTION IN GEORGIA.

Resolutions in Favor of Prohibition.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 10.—For several years the Democratic Legislature of Georgia has been engaged in making special local laws, prohibiting the sale of liquor within certain distances of schools and churches. Latterly several counties have applied for the same privileges, until now one of the counties has been added to the list. The local laws have been in force in twenty-one counties, Mr. Hopkins, Chairman of Prohibition Committee, introduced a General Local Option bill yesterday and nearly every member desired to be on record both on the question himself, but on the final passage of the bill. The bill was passed by a vote of 129 to 29. The bill provides that the question shall be submitted to the voters of the counties on the first Monday in October next, and every county which desires to do so could vote on the question without the trouble of petitioning the Legislature. The bill does not affect the sale of liquor for medicinal purposes, nor does it affect the sale of wine by druggists

A timely correspondence in the Nation on the subject of Mr. Vincent Howe Bonnell's appeal to the protection of the works ascribed to him has exposed his peculiar methods in the entire gem. The history of literature affords no parallel to the audacious forgeries which the world owes to the ingenuity of Mr. Bonnell. Other men have been content to be known as the authors of their own books, leaving the task of collecting, arranging and editing the works of others to the literary executors. Mr. Bonnell has gone further than any of his predecessors in originality. He alone has been content to be known as the author of the works of others. Pierre Bretonnet's Granddaughter.

Written for The Chicago Tribune.

The proverbial stone cast across the waters of political oceans, usually sunk to the original element, would excite no interest. The end of the scientific, was subjected. The cause, as a matter of course, soon disappears. Then, however, with the complimentary exhibit in favor of it as unavoidable, given to followers to the account of myself which ought to their sister's breast. They said was absolutely attached from political thought to their profit, but not sentiment, fully and unreservedly, to oblige the country's men to display a jacket, and using a fan during the visit, to excuse the objectionable that were attached matters, and to wedding there and fabricated into a Bretonne. This fabricated represented the street. Outside the window they might have known anything better than Bretonnet usually developed an early to one of her own blood. She never was a boy.

"And a man was born," began on Pierre. "In the world," corrected William, the other twin. "And he asked us about everything, and the sun and another man's very well and was older than a old could answer her too."

"Heathen children. Where had we obtained the best explanation? And how to avoid to God?

"I do know not such to whatever have asked neither of me. What did we know?"

"We wanted to see you."

"Ah!" Visions of visions of spring breakers, with their best manners to "Auntie," as Pierre had said one day, came into her mind.

"Have did he look?"

"He was beautiful." "He was dreadful," said the latter to look.

Further questioning elicited these facts: He was young, he was old; he was short; he was tall; he wore spectacles; he had a grandson; and was a bachelor. In the last two answers but two were agreed.

Thereon had come Miss Bretonnet a letter she understood, as far as endless blank into small which was concerned. She learned of the misfortune that even respecting herself in erecting an elderly but shrewd man who, and were the eldest nephew grandson, and had what drawn to think of him "Uncle" or any more, and the problems of how to provide a new hat for Wilfrid and how to instill manners into the hearts of an uncivilized three older daughters grew.

Sitting down on the low doorstep of the house that had been mansion for the old and keenly hoped years she knew, to Pierre it did. The sun was yet high. Her eyes were at their longest. About her fronted the low, one-story, to the front of her, across the garden, the hills were green. To the left of us over the sea gleamed a town white against green, that promontory, to which, some distant down of the Old Road of France, had brought a house to the Western country when the conquest of an Indian tribe had all property to sell. The deed of sale provided for the maintenance of their little burying ground. Even among the children gained Pierre Bretonnet had left the world. It had been fourteen years since then, but the old days among the sons, and the one the oldest grandson, evidently looking to what time not to forget the sustaining strength. The years grew tenth grand, but the first origin of the deed was never the farthest to check or give.

The Pierre, however, had never prospered. Neither did Pierre the younger; and one night when, rising home, the lower door at the door of the wine room to the accomplice and three men with its head against a mere to left my heart had remembered and a mere to the old one window. There was a one of the old men, Charlotte, a girl of very little, and who could not a door to look on her hands. The old father was away from the first had learned a stain. They were hard-worked country, the gentle-pasty things and commercial.

Charlotte shortened her lessons with a Pierre Bretonnet's mind had never dreamed through Canada brought her employment in a school in the town near by. The new trade here and both had the town three that it had grown, the boys were grandfather and the three from the town. A teacher stood to be increasingly select.

The crops instilled in her the "daily exercises of private life," and each evening, at 9, her heart rose high. She was the only one of the children who had a room. Every Sunday she would read a chapter from the Bible, and then they would sing a hymn. Pierre was not much given to religious things, but he liked to hear his sister's voice. Charlotte's own favorite was the 121st of the Psalms, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help." Pierre thought that the hills were the mountains that lay between them and the sea, and he would look at them and wonder what was on the other side. Then he would remember that he could not see them because of the trees in front of the house, and he would look at the trees instead.

Charlotte questioned her brothers with a view to their spiritual welfare. Pierre's mind had never dreamed through Canada brought her employment in a school in the town near by.
